This chart provides a starting point for feeding your cat. Age, breed, weight, activity level, and other factors will affect the amount of food required. Based on your cat’s individual needs, adjust your pet’s daily intake up or down to help maintain a healthy body condition; to ensure your cat’s good health, see your veterinarian regularly. Two to four times more food may be required for kittens, gestating cats, or nursing cats. Kittens weighing less than four pounds and/or younger than six weeks should be fed free choice. Spayed or neutered cats may require up to 25% less food. Always provide your cat with plenty of clean, fresh water. Visit frommfamily.com/feeding for additional feeding recommendations.
